

Ryan Rutherford joined My Vote Counts as an intern in April 2018. He obtained a B.A. in English Literature and Creative Writing in 2006, followed by an Honours Degree in English Literature in 2009, from the University of South Africa (UNISA). Ryan spent six years teaching English in South Korea, before returning to South Africa to complete a Masters Degree in International Relations at the University of Cape Town. While completing this degree, he was afforded the opportunity to spend the first semester of 2017 at Sciences Po, Paris, one of Europe's most prestigious political science institutions. Ryan co-founded an English-language magazine in Korea for which he wrote opinion pieces, profiles, as well as book and film reviews. He has also written for PoliticsWeb and the Korea Times.