

Minhaj has been working in various sectors of civil society for over eight years. He has experience and a keen interest in movement building, popular education, and deepening democracy.

He is the former National Coordinator of the Fight Inequality Alliance – a growing grassroots alliance organising in 30 countries. He coordinated a democratic process to build a broad-based and sustainable alliance that represents community-based organisations, social movements, NGOs, and trade unions across South Africa's nine provinces. Prior to joining the Fight Inequality Alliance, he was the Head of the Political Education Unit at Equal Education, a social movement that organises high school learners from working-class backgrounds around principles of an equal and decolonised education system.

As the Director of MVC, he hopes to strengthen the organisation's mandate to ensure government accountability and a deepened democracy.
